

First, allow me to say how much I like your website. Few people today (other than the Legionaries of Christ) speak of a “cruciform” or Cross-centered life. Or, better put, of preaching “Christ, and him crucified” as Paul put it. One can appreciate neither Christ’s Resurrection, nor risen life in Christ, without this key you have discovered and apparently promote so assiduously.

I also enjoyed your paper Arminianism vs. Calvinism and the Paradigm of the Cross, and agree with your conclusion that, “Believers should attempt to have “the best of both worlds”: a God-centred theology plus a life committed to be changed to accomplish the Father’s will.”

Peter J. Mango
Cornwall, ON